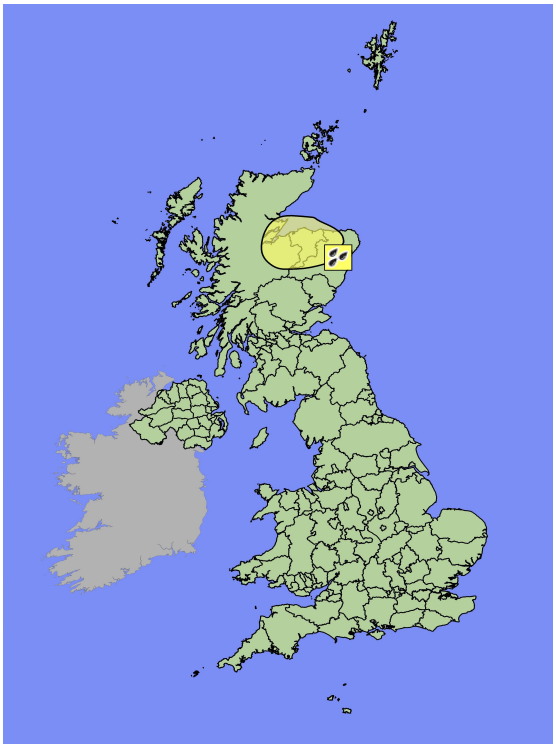
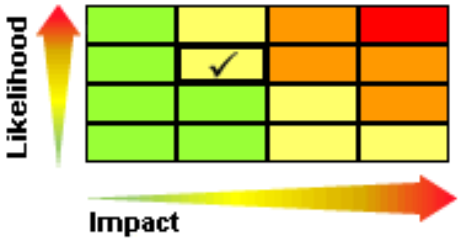
National Severe Weather Warning Service





CANCELLED

Chief Forecasters Assessment
A trough embedded in the much cooler northerly flow developing over Scotland will bring a spell of wintry weather into Northern Scotland on Friday. Whilst impacts will largely come from the rain at lower levels there is potential for some significant snow over higher ground also.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 09:00 on Fri, 27th Apr 2012 until 18:00 on Fri, 27th Apr 2012

After a drier spell overnight, outbreaks of rain, with snow on higher ground, will return to parts of Northern Scotland during Friday morning. A further 10-20 mm of rainfall possible, dying out towards evening. The public should be aware of standing water on roads and the continuing risk of localised flooding, mainly in the areas worst affected by the rain on Thursday. Some wet snow may also settle on the highest roads above 500m.
